

My Quest To Tap On The Power of Sex! Let Google Unleash the Fury

Somehow, I believe that there are still doubts that sex does work when it comes to attracting traffic. Don't get me wrong – I'm not the pioneer of this nor do I have huge success over the matter.

I have decided to increase my crummy unique hits over my website from 80/90-ish uniques per day to possibly 1,000 uniques by Christmas. My tactics –

1. Change my site's title from 'Michael Woo Business Ideas Tech Make Money Online Malaysian News Blog'

TO

'Michael Woo Business News Make Money Online Malaysia Sex Blog'

I have decided to forgo the word 'Tech' because it has no significance when it comes to search engine traffic. I'm targeting 'Malaysia Sex Blog' traffic and hopefully Google will list my site as number 1 – there is no direct hit on the number 1 spot yet by other blogs.

2. Delete MichaelWoo.net from my current MyBlogLog account and create a new account with a nice sexy picture. If you don't believe that I have got 3,000 page views, take a look at the screenshot below (I got more than 3,900 page views)

3. Disguise myself as a sexy vixen in forums, social media sites, etc…

Here are my thoughts on some pressing issues:

1. On credibility – Adam said that it might affect my credibility in the long run which I totally agree. But if this works and I get enormous traffic, I think that would be a higher priority

2. On blog ethics – There would be no 'pornographic' pictures on my blog, just sexy ones and comments are most welcome.

3. On creating a sustainable relationship with other blogs – I bet that this would be a hot topic to discuss as it's general and it's also basic knowledge.

Last but not least, I might fail miserably and here are some things that are at stake:

1. Credibility
2. Traffic
3. Reader's loyalty
4. Friends or Foes
5. Heavy criticism

The bet is high and here are some comments on my previous post:

xBrain and Edward got huge success when they used a sexy picture as their MyBlogLog avatar.

Wayne Liew sees this as a huge gold mine while Adam thinks that it will hurt your credibility in the long run.

Preblogging on the other hand would like to 'spice up' her MyBlogLog profile. What do you think?